Medical Research

The article by Drs. Clerf and Herbut is the third in a series of six such reports on cancer which will appear in The Journal. Written by cancer specialists, the series is sponsored by the office of the A.M.A.'s Committee on Research of the Council on Pharmacy and Chemistry. Previous articles discussed present day methods for the earliest possible diagnosis of cancer of the cervix and stomach, and subsequent ones will discuss cancer of the breast and the care of the hopelessly ill cancer patient.

Urge More Enlightened Attitude Toward Leprosy

Increasing interest in leprosy and the encouraging number of therapeutic agents open an entirely new vista to the leper, it was stated in the 10/11/52 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

With this improvement in treatment must come a more enlightened attitude toward this disease, according to Drs. George W. Zeluff, Houston, and G. J. Hayes, Alvin, Texas, who added:

"The word leprosy has cast a shadow of terror before it since times of antiquity. Despite the fact that it is far less contagious than tuberculosis and less prevalent, leprosy is considered a much greater hazard by the general public and, perhaps by the medical profession."

Leprosy, the doctors said, is a chronic, indolent, infectious disease. Only 0.1 per cent of the total persons afflicted with it are found in the United States, and the majority of these are found in California, Texas, Florida and Louisiana. There are 5,000,000 other lepers in the poverty-stricken, less enlightened areas of the world. The incubation period of leprosy varies from one to 10 years, and the disease is most frequently found in persons in their thirties.

Recent new advances in chemotherapy have made a marked improvement in the prognosis of leprosy, the doctors pointed out. Although all forms of treatment still require months or years, the greater efficiency of such drugs as the sulfones has radically changed the course and future of treatment in early leprosy.

Some gradual breaches in the wall of ignorance, stigma and therapeutic nihilism that has surrounded the victims of this disease, according to the doctors, are the medical discharge of a patient from the National Leprosarium in Carville, Louisiana, while still in the communicable stage of the disease, the removal of the barbed wire from the fence around the hospital, and the discharge of a patient from the leprosarium after six negative bacteriological examinations, instead of the usual 12.
